In this groundbreaking book, political scientist Ian Bremmer argues that we are living in a new era of global disorder—and that the old rules of international relations no longer apply.

Bremmer traces the roots of this disorder to the end of the Cold War, and the rise of a new class of global powers. He shows how these powers are challenging the old world order, and how their actions are creating a more dangerous and unpredictable world.

Bremmer argues that we need to rethink the way we think about global affairs. He calls for a new kind of leadership that is based on realism, pragmatism, and a deep understanding of the complex forces that are shaping our world.

This is an essential book for anyone who wants to understand the challenges of the 21st century. Bremmer provides a clear-eyed assessment of the current state of the world, and he offers concrete proposals for how we can build a more stable and prosperous future.
