In their new book, How Good Are We? Philosophy in Action, Peter Singer and Jonathan Wolff explore the nature of good and evil, and how we can live better lives. The book is a powerful and inspiring read that will challenge your assumptions and make you think about the world in a new way.

Singer and Wolff argue that we are all capable of great good and great evil, and that our choices have real consequences. They explore the different ethical theories that have been proposed over the centuries, and they show how these theories can be applied to real-world problems.

The book is divided into four parts. The first part, "The Nature of Good and Evil," explores the different ways that philosophers have defined good and evil. The second part, "The Good Life," examines what it means to live a good life. The third part, "The Ethics of Action," explores the ethical principles that we should use to guide our actions. The fourth part, "The Future of Ethics," looks at the challenges that we face in the 21st century and how philosophy can help us to meet these challenges.

How Good Are We? Philosophy in Action is a must-read for anyone interested in philosophy, ethics, or the human condition. The book is a powerful and inspiring read that will challenge your assumptions and make you think about the world in a new way.
