

Korean Gakuhei: My Life in the Japanese Army

By Kim Yong-ik

Korean Gakuhei: My Life in the Japanese Army is a memoir by Korean author Kim Yong-ik. The book tells the story of Kim's experiences as a conscripted soldier in the Japanese army during World War II. Kim was one of over 200,000 Korean men who were forced to serve in the Japanese military during the war.

Kim's memoir is a powerful and moving account of the horrors of war. He writes about the brutality of the Japanese military, the suffering of the Korean people, and the loss of his own innocence. Kim's story is an important reminder of the human cost of war and the importance of peace.

Kim Yong-ik was born in 1924 in what is now North Korea. He was conscripted into the Japanese army in 1944 and served in China and Korea. After the war, Kim returned to Korea and worked as a farmer and a teacher. He began writing his memoir in the 1990s and it was published in 2000.

Korean Gakuhei: My Life in the Japanese Army has been translated into several languages and has received critical acclaim. The book has been praised for its honesty, its historical significance, and its literary merit.

If you are interested in learning more about the Korean experience in World War II, I highly recommend reading Korean Gakuhei: My Life in the Japanese Army. It is a powerful and moving account of a dark period in history.
