

Nuclear Bribes, Russian Spies, and the Washington Lies That Enriched the Clintons

In the wake of the 2016 presidential election, the American public has been captivated by the ongoing investigation into Russian interference in the campaign. At the center of this investigation are allegations that the Clinton Foundation, a charitable organization founded by former President Bill Clinton and his wife, former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, accepted donations from foreign governments in exchange for political favors.

Now, in a bombshell new book, investigative journalist Peter Schweizer reveals the shocking truth about these allegations. Based on years of research and exclusive interviews, Nuclear Bribes, Russian Spies, and the Washington Lies That Enriched the Clintons exposes the Clinton Foundation's deep ties to the Russian government and its role in a massive bribery scheme that enriched the Clintons and their associates.

The Clinton Foundation's Ties to the Russian Government

The Clinton Foundation was founded in 2001 with the stated mission of improving global health and development. However, Schweizer's investigation reveals that the foundation has also been used as a conduit for foreign governments to curry favor with the Clintons.

In 2005, for example, the Russian government donated $500,000 to the Clinton Foundation while Hillary Clinton was serving as a U.S. senator from New York. The donation came just months after the Clinton Foundation had received a $100,000 donation from the Russian aluminum company Rusal. According to Schweizer, these donations were part of a pattern of Russian influence-peddling that extended throughout the Clinton Foundation's existence.

In addition to the direct donations, the Clinton Foundation also received millions of dollars from foreign governments through intermediaries. For example, the foundation received $14 million from the Qatari government through a Qatari foundation. The Qatari government has been accused of supporting terrorism, and its donations to the Clinton Foundation raised concerns that the foundation was being used to launder money for terrorist organizations.

The Bribery Scheme

Schweizer's investigation also reveals that the Clinton Foundation was involved in a massive bribery scheme that enriched the Clintons and their associates.

The scheme began in 2005, when the Russian government agreed to pay $500 million to a company called Uranium One in exchange for control of a majority stake in the company's uranium mines in the United States. Uranium One was a Canadian company, but its operations in the United States were subject to the approval of the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States (CFIUS), a U.S. government agency that reviews foreign investments in the United States for national security concerns.

The approval of the Uranium One deal required the support of Hillary Clinton, who was then serving as Secretary of State. According to Schweizer, the Clintons used their influence to pressure CFIUS to approve the deal, even though it posed a national security risk. In exchange for their support, the Clintons received millions of dollars from Uranium One and its Russian backers.

The Washington Lies

The Clinton Foundation's ties to the Russian government and its involvement in the Uranium One deal have been the subject of intense scrutiny. However, the Clintons and their allies have repeatedly denied any wrongdoing.

In 2015, Hillary Clinton testified before the House Select Committee on Benghazi that she had never discussed the Uranium One deal with her husband. However, Schweizer's investigation reveals that Hillary Clinton did discuss the deal with her husband, and that she was aware of the potential national security risks involved.

The Clintons have also claimed that the donations they received from foreign governments were not linked to any political favors. However, Schweizer's investigation reveals that the donations were often made in close proximity to key policy decisions that benefited the donors. For example, the Russian government donated $500,000 to the Clinton Foundation just months before Hillary Clinton voted to approve the Uranium One deal.

The Impact of the Clinton Foundation Scandal

The Clinton Foundation scandal has had a significant impact on American politics. The scandal has damaged the reputations of Hillary Clinton and her husband, and it has raised questions about the integrity of the U.S. government.

The scandal has also led to calls for campaign finance reform. Many people believe that the Clinton Foundation scandal is a prime example of how foreign governments can use money to influence American politics. Campaign finance reform advocates argue that new laws are needed to prevent foreign governments from donating money to U.S. politicians and political organizations.

Nuclear Bribes, Russian Spies, and the Washington Lies That Enriched the Clintons is a bombshell new book that exposes the shocking truth about the Clinton Foundation's ties to the Russian government and its involvement in a massive bribery scheme. The book is based on years of research and exclusive interviews, and it provides a damning indictment of the Clintons and their corrupt use of power.

The Clinton Foundation scandal is a major story that has the potential to shape American politics for years to come. The book is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the full extent of the scandal and its implications for the United States.
