In the years after World War II, Beaton kept a series of diaries that offer a fascinating glimpse into the lives of the elite. The Strenuous Years 1948-55 is the fourth volume in the series, and it covers a period of great change in British society.

The war had left Britain bankrupt and exhausted. The country was struggling to rebuild its economy and its infrastructure, and there was a growing sense of social and political unrest. Beaton's diaries provide a firsthand account of these tumultuous times.

Beaton was a keen observer of the human condition, and his diaries are full of vivid descriptions of the people he met. He writes about the Queen Mother's love of horses, Winston Churchill's bulldog tenacity, and Salvador Dalí's eccentric behavior.

Beaton was also a gifted writer, and his diaries are a pleasure to read. He has a sharp wit and a keen eye for detail, and he brings the people and events of his time to life.

The Strenuous Years 1948-55 is an indispensable volume for anyone interested in the social and cultural history of post-war Britain. Cecil Beaton's diaries offer a fascinating glimpse into the lives of the elite, and they provide a valuable insight into the challenges and opportunities of the period.
